Streets and Stores Scenes of Light and Life-Christmas Buying On.

MANY ATTRACTIVE NOVELTIES

Marts of the World Have Contributed to Catch the Shopper's Eve and Purse.

Every one is a-shopping these days. The department stores and retail conters present the appearance of sections of a stock exchange or cotton pit dragged into public view. On every side rise up attractive articles demanding to be bought, while the eyes look longingly down vistas of pretty things. One is jostled and pushed about by fellow shoppers; friends are meeting friends, a merry chatter is constantly going on; one is continually separating himself from is continually separating himself from his money, acquiring bundles in its place: the stores are open after 6 octock; each store is a section, of day held back long after the sun has crept health the blue western hills; the streets are crowded with men, women and children, booded and wrapped, and hurrying hetween home and shop, or shop and shop, laughing, talking, planning, hearth; good-natured, merry, if you please, and happy, with eyes bright and expection. Expect and closer, with each new purchase—that is Christmas gets bigger and bigger, minser and closer, with each new purchase—that is Christmas shopping.

GREAT ENFECTATIONS.

One of the propretors of a leading department state said yesterday that his shopping se far had been the largest his store had ever known. One of several conditions would readily explain that alremmatures without any one them being that the Richmond people are spending more money than formerly.

Alany have expressed the opinion that the approaching Christmas would not be so meetly as last, and not so large an amount of the losses by those who held stocks, and because some of the great manufacturing plants have been cutting down thoir forces. But either the one of the other will harfily be felt except by the individuals concerned. Richmond and its suburbs easily embrace in 18,000 persons. The misfortune of a few or even of a class, is but remotely felt by the great hody. While some are poorer, others are richer and the world "wags on" just the same.

ALL WILL CELEBRATE. his money, acquiring bundles in its worm, so to speak, seems to be worrying Richmond people more than ever before anyway.

Not for a decade, if ever before, was a Thanksgiving Day so generally observed as that just past. People work harder here now than ever before. They are responding more than ever to the demand of the times for quickness of movement and alertness of mind. When a season of rest and recreation comes the demand for the enjoyment of it is irrosistible. A genuinely merry Christmas may be expected and preparation for it is being made on a large scale.

The ingenuity of man is mightly taxed to prepare new things for Christmas shopping. Something must be found to catch the popular fancy. It is a real problem with thousands each year to select articles they wish to give their friends. If the shop keepers secures attractive novelties and thus helps to dispel the difficulty he has won many customers. Each of the big stores has gotten some striking novelties. One brought beautiful needle-work of rare heauty, of the most delicate blendings of color, of soft look and touch, from fereign lands, scores of beautiful and useful articles in agate from Denmark; another brought colluidod novelties and many other ingenuous small things from Germany; yet another has searched the marts of the old country and the new burnt wood and leather goods which were never so popular as now. A Gibson girl with her head on a leather cushion is a thing often seen and very pleasing. ion is a thing often seen and very pleas-

The stores seemed to have provided themselves more abundantly with books this season than ever before. One store proudly claims it has every book one may call for. It is true that the stores are selling standard works from 5 cents

Of course, the department stores pre-Of course, the department stores present the busiest appearance, because of the great variety of goods they carry attracting almost every variety of toste. The buyers of these stores have done their difficult work well. Richmond shoppers are as well provided for doubtless, as are those of the great Northern cities, where department stores occupy a square of ground space and pile aloft to the clouds.

a square of ground space and pile aloft to the clouds.
Indications are that the people of Richmorid are going to give some very handsome presents this Christmas. The jewelry stores are already doing an excellent business. They, too, have novelties to offer. Chief of these is the silver deposit on cut glass. The effect is very striking and perfume bottles, decanters, flasks, water bottles and a dozen other articles promise to be favorite gifts. "Thiany glass" ware also promises to be favorites. The old Sheffield waters of copper, heavily plated with silver, are again thrusting themselves upon public attention, after many years of undisturbed slumber in garrets of castles and ancient mansions.

years of undisturbed stumber in garrets of castles and ancient mansions.

Besides the shopping for Christmas there is the market man to be interviewed. But it is too early for this. No famine need be feared, though edibles are going to be up in "g" prices.

Mrs. Isabella J. Jinkins.

Mrs. Isabella J. Jinkins.

Too much praise cannot be given to the beautiful feneral ceremonies conducted at the grave of the late Mrs. Isabella J. Jinkins, by Golden Eagle Council, No. 9. Degree of Pocahontas, of which she was a member. It was the first time that any council of the Degree of Pocahontas in this city has been visited by the death of a member; consequently, it was the first funeral service of the kind ever conducted in this city, and was considered one of the most beautiful. During the ceremony, a lovely dove was given its freedom and after energing the grave several times, flew to parts unknown. It was very solemn and beautiful and seemed to impress every one present, and much favorable comment has been passed on these unique services.
